AVON EDITION WINTER 2010

Swan CCI discusses urgent need for Swan Valley Bypass

The Swan Chamber of Commerce and Industry breakfast in March heard from the Hon Judi Moylan MP and its guest speaker, the Shadow Minister for Transport, the Hon Warren Truss MP, on the urgent need for improved road infrastructure in the Pearce electorate, specifically the Great Northern Highway and a new Swan Valley bypass.

"The Perth-Darwin Highway is clearly a very important project for the Pearce electorate and for Western Australia," Shadow Minister Truss said.

The current road, although being upgraded, was never meant to carry heavy traffic, including extra long and extra wide haulage vehicles. They are using this stretch of road in vastly increasing numbers. In fact, 4,744 heavy haulage vehicles now take this route Monday to Friday.

Work on this highway and, in particular, the bypass needs to be scheduled and funded without further delay.

Moylan hosts briefing on Perth-Darwin Highway

Mrs Moylan and Mr Truss joined Swan Hills MLA Frank Alban, City of Swan Mayor Charlie Zannino and Deputy Mayor Mick Wainwright, City of Swan CEO Mike Foley, Chittering Shire Councillor Don Gibson and Bindoon Safe Roads Committee Chairman Ian Watson in being briefed on the status of the project by Lou Rho and Lindsey Broadhurst of Main Roads.

The attendees were given the opportunity to raise any issue relating to the Highway, including bypasses for the Swan Valley and Bindoon and the land acquisition required to complete those projects. All agreed the Perth-Darwin Highway is vital to community safety and the quality of life of residents along the Great Northern Highway as well as the future mining and resources boom in Western Australia's north.

"Currently Great Northern Highway is the major link road to the North West and there are sound reasons why it should be given urgent priority," Mrs Moylan said.

"These include a lack of suitability of current roads to cope with heavy transport, the safety of local drivers and the local community and the need to transport goods safely in a cost-effective road system.

Perth-Darwin Highway a priority: Moylan

Road forum to push for Highway construction

At a forum organised by the East Metropolitan Regional Council, which was attended by Members from the City of Swan, the Shire of Chittering, road transport organisations and residents and ratepayers associations, the Hon Judi Moylan MP called on everyone present to work with a single goal and speak with one voice.

As a result of the forum, stakeholders have resolved to work together in pushing for the construction of the Perth-Darwin Highway.

"Two major components of this project include bypasses for the Swan Valley and Bindoon," Mrs Moylan said.

"We need these bypasses to advance individual safety, safeguard the integrity of the Swan Valley and ensure the efficient transport of goods."

Mrs Moylan said all levels of Government must work hand-in-hand with the community and Main Roads to see this project realised.

"Whilst the Federal Government funds national highways, it is a political reality that the State Government determines the priority given to works, and competition is fierce," Mrs Moylan said.

"Our focus is to assist Main Roads do their job by pushing the State Government to give this project priority; to ensure that the Federal Government maintains funding for national highways; and demand that Western Australia receives a fair share of that funding.

Avon Youth helps Arron chase his dream

Though often unacknowledged by the wider community, the work of Northam's Avon Youth has not gone unnoticed by Arron Morgon.

Arron, 20, is a shining example of the excellent work done at the centre after having faced enormous challenges in his life.

"I was 19 and after my mum died I hit rock bottom," Arron said. "I had no income, nothing."

"I came to Avon Youth, who got me some grief counselling and they have stood by me every step of the way. They have helped me so much and I cannot speak highly enough of the people at Avon Youth, especially (Avon Youth CEO) Jacqui (Stutt). I feel so much better."

In recent times Arron has volunteered with Avon Youth and recently started his pre-apprenticeship as a diesel mechanic.

"Being a diesel mechanic has been my dream for as long as I can remember," Arron said. "Now I can chase that dream." Avon Youth CEO Jacqui Stutt said. "We have a holistic approach to their needs. We walk with them and support them, but ultimately it is their journey. It is a philosophy of thinking as well as a philosophy of working."

Arron is a great example of what Avon Youth does. "To Arron's credit he has become a positive role model for the younger boys," she said. "He has shown them they can have goals and don't

Toodyay says thank you

The Toodyay community has come together to say thank you to the emergency service officers and community volunteer organisations who aided the town during the December bushfire.

Members of Toodyay's volunteer bushfire brigades, the Fire and Emergency Services Authority, Shire Rangers, and volunteers who offered a variety of services during the recovery effort were acknowledged by the Shire of Toodyay, the Bushfire Recovery Team and the Western Australian State Government with certificates of appreciation acknowledging many worthy contributions.

"We were very honoured to be able to gather and formally thank those who made contributions to the recovery effort," Toodyay Fire Recovery Coordinator Charlie Wroth said.

"It was also humbling to see so many people there. It re-united many people who had been part of the recovery effort and it was a great way for them to come together; in a social occasion such as that. It was just a very small way for us to say thank you."

The Recovery effort continues, with rebuilding meetings held each fortnight, while monetary donations can still be made to the Toodyay Bushfire Appeal at The Bendigo Centre, PO Box 480, Bendigo, VIC 3552 or by visiting <http://shop.bendigobank.com.au/public/foundation/shopdisplayproducts.asp?id=19&cat=Appeals>.

While Mr Wroth hoped to never see such a tragedy impact Toodyay again, he acknowledged the events of last December had brought the people of Toodyay closer together.

"It has also brought a lot of new people into the town, a lot of new volunteers who have assisted any way they can," Mr Wroth said.

Support real action

Tony Abbott and the Liberals have a clear plan to deliver real action on the things that matter to you.

We will provide strong economic management.

Tony Abbott and the Liberals will balance the Budget, reduce Labor's debt, ease financial pressure on Australian families and protect jobs.

We will oppose Mr Rudd's great big new mining tax.

Mr Rudd's new tax is a serious threat to all Australians. It will put jobs, investment and superannuation at risk and cause massive flow-on effects across our economy, including higher electricity prices and building costs.

We will implement a fair dinkum paid parental leave scheme.

Our scheme will provide six months parental leave at full pay, giving women real time and real money to care for their newborns.

We will stop the National Broadband Network.

Australia can't afford to spend $43 billion on Labor's white elephant National Broadband Network, when local roads and infrastructure should be a greater priority.

We will protect private health insurance and improve local health services.

Tony Abbott and the Liberals will fight to take the pressure off families and public hospitals by opposing Mr Rudd's cuts to the private health care rebate.

We believe Australia's local hospitals need more doctors, nurses and beds – not more bureaucrats. Our plan for real action will fix our public hospitals with strong hospital local boards that put patients first.

We will take real action to reduce emissions and protect our environment.

We will establish an Emissions Reduction Fund to reduce carbon emissions and deliver real environmental benefits. We will also form a standing Green Army to tackle local environmental challenges.

Only the Coalition stands for lower taxes, smaller government and a fair go for families.

Older Australians make their voices heard

Judi Moylan MP has had an overwhelming response to her speech on the Intergenerational Report.

Following Judi Moylan's speech on the Intergenerational Report, which featured in her Autumn 2010 newsletter, Mrs Moylan has been asking for feedback from the electorate.

More than 20,000 constituents aged 55 and over were asked for their opinion and the feedback has been overwhelming. "I thoroughly agree with you when you state that older citizens should not be a target for any cut backs in services," wrote one constituent.

"They paid their taxes, worked long hours, raised families, some on very low wages.

"All senior citizens have earned the right to live the remainder of their lives without wondering if their entitlements will be reduced or maybe taken away all together."

Many respondents commented on the vast experience and wisdom older Australians have to offer society and particularly the workforce. "We have no doubt that the collective experience and knowledge that our generation can bring to the voluntary workforce of this nation is huge and if Government had to pay a wage to have this work done, their budgets would be forever in the red," responded one Pearce resident.

Mrs Moylan was heartened by the response and said she will continue to represent the interests of older Australians in Parliament and in the community.

Long Table Lunch raises vital funds for Diabetes

Following the inaugural Long Table Lunch for Diabetes in 2009, the 2010 event was also a success, raising a further $11,775 for Diabetes WA.

This year's event, which was co-hosted by the Hon Judi Moylan MP and Diabetes WA, was held at River Bank Estate Winery and Restaurant in April with a number of Western Australia's leading diabetes professionals in attendance. These included Professor Alex Cohen as well as the Hon Peter Dutton MP, Shadow Minister for Health and Ageing.

The lunch featured the auction of a limited edition print by Robert Juniper as well as a once in a lifetime Swan River Sailing package including a three-hour twilight sailing program at Royal Perth Yacht Club.

"Diabetes is not just a matter of concern to health professionals, but a concern to all levels of Government and people in general," the Hon Judi Moylan MP said.

"Diabetes WA offer vital support and education services to people living with diabetes, helping them live well with their condition. An event such as this helps to raise much needed funding to support the work of Diabetes WA as well as raising awareness of the national health implications of diabetes.

"I am very grateful for the generosity of those supporting this event and am delighted we raised these much needed funds for the fight against diabetes," said Mrs Moylan. The event was sponsored by KCI medical and Industrial Recruitment Partners.

Inquiry into Bushfires visits WA

“Having been the Federal Member for the Seat of Pearce for 17 years I have seen the destructive power of bushfires and the emotional impact on people in the aftermath.”

Hon Judi Moylan MP

The Senate Select Committee on Agricultural and Related Industries' inquiry into bushfires in Australia visited Perth recently to hear evidence from some of Western Australia's pre-eminent experts in the field.

The Hearing heard evidence from a variety of organisations and individuals including the Fire and Emergency Services Authority, the WA Department of Environment and Conservation and Volunteer Bushfire Brigades.

The Committee, which is chaired by NSW Senator Bill Heffernan, was informed on the extent and effectiveness of bushfire mitigation strategies and practices in WA, factors contributing to the causes and risks of bushfires across Australia and measures that can be undertaken by government, industry and the community to protect agricultural and service industries, small business, tourism and water catchments from fire.

The issue of ageing power reticulation in WA, a matter the Hon Judi Moylan MP has raised with the Prime Minister and State Energy Minister on several occasions as well as in her own written submission to the inquiry, was also raised.

“Having been the Federal Member for the Seat of Pearce for 17 years I have seen the destructive power of bushfires and the emotional impact on people in the aftermath,” Mrs Moylan said.

The most recent Toodyay fire in December 2009 injured one person with burns to ten per cent of her body, placed the lives of fire-fighters, shire rangers and emergency services workers at risk, burnt through 3,000 hectares of land, burnt down 38 homes and damaged several others.

“I found the hearing to be a helpful and informative exercise in broadening my knowledge of this issue at both a state and national level and would encourage anyone with an interest in bushfire safety to view a transcript of the day's proceedings. To see the transcript visit:

Transcripts for the other hearings around Australia can also be viewed at this site as well as Mrs Moylan's submission. Once hearings have concluded a report on the inquiry will be released and tabled in Parliament.

Residents have their say on aircraft noise

The Senate Standing Committee on Rural and Regional Affairs and Transport's Inquiry into the effectiveness of Air Services Australia's management of aircraft noise held its Perth Hearing on 28 April 2010.

The Hon Judi Moylan MP, along with members of the Fairskies community action group, attended the hearing, which was chaired by Senator Fiona Nash. Fairskies members Ian Davies, Tony Anderson, John Daw, Mike Heath, Sharon Davies, Barbara Steemson, Mandy Skeates and Peter Stewart each gave outstanding evidence as to the impacts of aircraft noise on their local communities.

The Committee was receptive to these presentations and left with a clear understanding of the problems aircraft noise has caused Hills residents and the wider community. The important technical and anecdotal evidence given will provide added context in the drafting of the final report.

Mrs Moylan made a written submission to the Inquiry, raising many important points regarding Air Services Australia's management of aircraft noise, including the consultative process, the impact of flight path changes and the nature of these changes.

“As air traffic will continue to grow and the impact on communities is likely to intensify, it is vital that immediate changes are made to ensure that there is a consistent national procedure for adequate consultation between Air Services Australia and the Australian community,” Mrs Moylan said.

“It is simply unacceptable that for many people the impact of aircraft noise is a constant, and their quality of life is damaged by the ever present noise and pollution of overhead planes.

“It is vital that the community is engaged to the fullest degree possible in the decision making process on flight paths, as ultimately it is the community who is most affected.”

Evidence given at the Hearing established that Air Services Australia withheld vital information from the committee for several years despite repeated requests for the CASA Safety report, which was said to have formed the main basis for the changes, the Environmental Assessment Report and the Noise Assessment Report.

“The simplistic argument that the consultative Committee PANMCC did not understand the charts that Air Services provided is a red herring designed to divert attention to the lack of Air Services Australia's open and accountable public consultation process,” Mrs Moylan said.

In evidence given at the Hearing, Air Services Australia's Richard Dudley said that aircraft noise was a ‘perception issue’.

“It is not simply a perception issue for those living under the flight paths,” Mrs Moylan said. “The attitude conveyed in the comments of Mr Dudley goes to the heart of the problem. The Act governing ASA was passed in 1995 and now that ASA is a corporate entity and takes a substantial amount of its revenue from private interests there appears to be no public accountability.

“There is nothing in the current Act that requires ASA to conduct open accountable public consultations.”

The Inquiry's final report is expected to be tabled in Parliament some time in June following hearings in other major Australian cities.

Anzac Day – A time to reflect

Mateship, courage, bravery and determination are the hallmarks of the Anzac spirit, which were on display at Anzac Day services around the Pearce electorate.

Beyond major ceremonies in Canberra and the state capital cities, regional and rural towns hosted Dawn Services and Marches as well as many schools delivering their own tribute. Families joined the commemorations showing respect, recognition and remembrance for Australia's service personnel.

The Federal Member for Pearce, the Hon Judi Moylan MP, said Anzac Day was a day to remember the lost men and women of all wars, the returned servicemen and women of past campaigns and conflicts, families of veterans and currently serving personnel.

On Anzac Day, old regiments reform to march down streets in towns and cities across Australia. Veterans of past conflicts proudly display their medals and are urged on by enthusiastic crowds of supporters, including families and veterans who are unable to march.

Australians also reflect on the service of those men and women currently wearing Australia's uniform in Afghanistan, Timor-Leste, the Solomon Islands and other places around the world today.

Bullsbrook District High School principal Bernadette Jones delivered a poignant speech at the school's Anzac Service.

Youth and violence discussed in Northam

The Parliamentary Committee on Family, Community, Housing and Youth heard first-hand the impact of violence on youth in the regional and rural communities after holding an informal hearing in Northam recently.

The hearing, which included sessions at Northam Senior High School and Avon Youth, was the idea of the committee's Deputy Chair and the Federal Member for Pearce, the Hon Judi Moylan MP.

For the past six months the Committee has been conducting an inquiry into the impact of violence on young Australians and have heard evidence in a number of Australian cities. However, this is the first opportunity the Committee, which is chaired by Canberra MP Annette Ellis, has had to visit a regional centre.

"It is not always easy for practical purposes to get Parliamentary Committees into the rural and regional areas," Mrs Moylan said.

"The excellent mix and balance of people from the Avon and surrounding areas provided a snapshot of the issue of youth and violence. The Committee gained valuable insights into the programs that work and the particular challenges young people face in rural and regional areas as distinct from city-based youth."

Many young Australians confront violence in their everyday life with profound effects.

Some remain trapped and are unable to escape the cycle of violence.

"It is a whole of community concern and if our young people are to feel safe at home and in their local communities, everyone needs to consider what can be done to decrease the level of violence that young people encounter in their day to day lives," Mrs Moylan said.

Men's Shed launched in Toodyay

The phenomenon that is the Men's Shed has swept into Toodyay, with the Toodyay Men's Shed launched recently.

Problems with men's health, isolation, loneliness and depression are looming as major health issues for men. Men's sheds can play a significant and practical role in addressing these and other men's issues. Men's sheds can help connect men with their communities and mainstream society and at the same time act as a catalyst in stimulating their community's economic activities.

Toodyay Men's Shed chairman Jeff Roberts said the Toodyay branch of the increasingly popular movement had a clear list of aims and objectives, which include providing a neutral place where men can be creative and productive while providing an environment where men's health issues can be raised and discussed.

"Men are often reluctant to talk about their health, but the Men's Shed is a place where men can speak to a friend about how they are feeling and should they be feeling depressed it's up to that friend to take action," Mr Roberts said. "It's about blokes supporting other blokes."

Toodyay has 50 members with 30,000 men Australia-wide now part of the Men Shed movement. Those wanting to join the Toodyay Men's Shed can write to PO Box 575 Toodyay WA 6567 or phone Jeff Roberts on (08) 9574 2498.
